

Lifeline and Service Provider FAQ

Below you'll find a few FAQ regarding the Lifeline program and the plans offered through its service providers.

Q: What is Lifeline?

A: Lifeline is a federal program that helps low-income individuals and households receive basic telecommunication services for free or at a discounted rate.

Q: How do I know if I qualify for the program?

A: You are qualified for Lifeline if you or someone in your household participates in one of following federal assistance programs: SNAP, Medicaid, SSI, FPHA, Veterans Pension and Survivors Benefit, or Tribal Programs. A prescreening tool is available at www.lifelinesupport.org. Each qualified household is entitled to one phone.

Q: Is Lifeline available in my state?

A: Lifeline is available in every state; however, provider options vary by state.

Q: How do I enroll?

A: You can apply through a Lifeline program provider. PeopleReady recommends Q Link or SafeLink. To locate a Lifeline provider in your area, visit www.lifelinesupport.org.

Q: What kind of phone will I get when I enroll?

A: The phone you receive depends on the plan you choose. Q Link offers the ZTE N817 smartphone to new customers. SafeLink offers a number of options, including a "Bring Your Own Phone" plan. You can decide which plan is best for you by visiting their websites.

Q: How much data will I receive through these providers?

A: Your data limit depends on the service and plan you choose. Q Link offers free data plans of 500MB per month, with the option to purchase more. You can learn more about each plan by visiting the providers' websites.

Q: What happens if I don't make calls or send SMS messages?

A: Lifeline customers are required to make at least one call or send one SMS message every month. Failure to do so will lead to disenrollment from the program.
